

Yezika's weekly report #3

19th of June to 25th of June 2006

Monday 19th of June.

After a rather strange but yet wonderful week, at least for me, i begun this week with a haste. I didn't even got a chance to wake up properly before Enrondin asked me if i had the time to aid him and some friends inside Dire Maul. There was something going on between him and the ogres there it seemed. The whole thing was over rather fast and i didn't get a grip of the full situation of was going on. However the ogres seemed very happy of what we did in there, something i never thought i would see. Ogres are not so bad as everyone seem to think, they just need a better leader to look up to.

Me and Enrondin decided to travel to The Barrens to do some relaxing fishing after our visit in Dire Maul. Enrondin even showed me his new outfit he had got his hands on. I must say that black isn't my favorite color, but it sure suited a dwarf like Enrondin.

Me and Enrondin visiting The Barrens in the evening.

The only bad thing with this day was that i couldn't seem to find Kiia anywhere. I hope nothing bad has happened to her. Hope i can get some sleep without worrying to death.

Tuesday 20th of June.

Today is a day i will never forget i think. Me and Kiia had decided to have a talk with Wildbeast about something rather important. Can't go in to details at the moment. Depends on how you see it, i think it was a good meeting. However Wildbeast did chose to leave our guild, and for that im a bit sorry. But i think it might was the best to happened for both him and us. Wildbeast promised to still keep an watching eye over Kiia and me, that feels good to know.

Kiia, me and Wildbeast in Moonglade.

Kiiioth, Kiia's sister, was in need of help in her desperate chase for eggs.? She had found some new recipe that she wanted to try out. She had spotted some birds in the dessert of Tanaris that would carry around on the eggs that she needed. Kiia and myself decided to help her out and set course to Tanaris in the south. Kiiioth showed me and Kiia some new fighting skills she had learned on her journeys across Azeroth. The young girl have learned some impressive fighting moves.

The eggs was not a problem to find, and we packed our things and decided to return to Ironforge and meet up with Mayá that was in some sort of depression. When we meet Mayá she was very sad and didn't know what to do. Comforting her didn't seem to do much help either. But we wanted to know what was wrong. Luck was with us today. Her friend Bryen showed up in Ironforge not long after us. Then everything happened rather fast. Mayá begged for Bryen to join our guild and i had no choice but to let him in. Well.. i did have a choice, but that would mean that Mayá probably would be so depressed that i wouldn't want to risk that what could happened. I had known Bryen a little since before and i had a feeling that he would enjoy our guild. Not long after Bryen had officially become a part of our group him and Mayá started to act a bit... strange. It ended with Mayá yelling all over Ironforge that she wanted to marry Bryen. Bryen who seemed a bit chocked did however answer.... Yes! to Mayás proposal. It was such a relief to see Mayá smile again that i completely forgotten about time.

Mayá and Bryen in Ironforge

Wednesday 21th of June.

Ohh my... I walked down from the flight master in Stormwind and the first thing i meet was a skeleton running around in the street and a few guards were after it. I have just flew in from Ironforge and the sight i saw outside Ironforge and when i closed up to Stormwind was not a pretty one. Big floating constructions of the undead it seemed like.

The Argent Dawn, who had raised a small tent inside Stormwind to inform people about what happened told me that the scourge has begun their invasion. Not very good news ofcourse but the Argent Dawn was prepared. However they needed our help.

The alliance didn't seem to take the Scourge invasion very seriously though.. they were celebratth Midsummer Fire Festival. Maybe it wast a way to keep their minds on something else then the invasion. Even in Darnassus they had put up candles all over the place. The lakes looked really beautiful. Kiia, Mayá, Kiiioth and me decided to take a journey across Kalimdor to see how many bonfires we could spot.

Kiia was invited to talk about a possible relationship with our guild and the "Natures Grasp" so she had to leave our group a bit early along with Kiiioth. Mayá and myself choosed to not look for more fires tonight.

Thursday 22th of June.

Today Grove of Eternal Balance gathered up some of our members to take a closer look on the threat of the scourge. First some of us meet up in Azhara, and then moved south to Tanaris where even more joined us.

Some of the Elders of our guild gathered together in Darnassus to have a meeting about the current situation of the Shadow Council and our fight against it. We did also discuss if we should try to work out some sort of agreement between our guild and the Nature Grasp. The elders were not united in that question, but with three votes against one we decided to try to work something out with Natures Grasp. We also talked about the current situation of the Shadow Council and how we should proceed with it. I was not allowed to write any details about it just yet, as it might end up in the wrong hands, but we will talk about it at our upcoming guild meeting the coming Wednesday at 19:00.

Some of our guild members later ventured into the jungle in Stranglethorn to confirm the rumors about the trolls in Zul'Gurub. They have seemed to gather up pretty well since our last visit there. But Eternal Vigil still can keep them calm.

Kiia and me later took a long journey and talked about everything between heaven and earth. We ended up in Moonglade and decided to take a bath before we go to bed and sleep. The water in Lake Elune'ara is the most fantastic water to swim in. Both Kiia and me can agree on that.

Friday 23th of June.

Moonglade have it's good sides. Great beds, good food, quiet and beautiful enviornments and hopefully some good company too. That was what i experienced when i woke up today. By my side Kiia still slept tight. I walked down from our sleeping place and decided to leave Kiia a message so she knew where i would be. The lady behind the counter promised to tell Kiia what i told her, that i would travel to Azshara.

On my way i did meet Kiiioth, Kiiias sister. We use to run into each other everyday it seems, so it was not that big of a surprise to me when i spotted her. My mission in Azshara was to get a glowing stick from the midsummer bonfire they had set up at some location. Azshara is a big place with lot's of wild animals, and their local blood elves also having a camp in the area didn't make locating the fire any easier. After some time we did however find the fire, not far away from the Timbermaw Post.

Kiiioth however wasn't satisfied. She had heard of more fires in the southern parts of Kalimdor. One in Un'Goro Crater and one in Silithus. I was a bit doubtful to begin with. Kiiioth did everything she could to get me to go with her as she believed she would not handle the terrain alone. The raptors in Un'Goro scared even myself, but we did locate the bonfire where it was said it should be. The one in Silithus was also easy located. We did receive some help from the Scenario Circle with some over-grown worms that kept chasing us.

I don't know if Kiia did oversleep some hours or if the woman had forgotten to give her my message. It was late in the evening when i first heard from her. We did meet up in Ironforge with Kiiioth, Spjuthök, Chindo, Hamayumi, Onixiana and some other from our guild. Spjuthök introduced us to Anaïs and asked if she could be a part of our guild. Me and Kiia introduced ourselves to the her and she seemed interested in helping Grove of Eternal Balance with it's many assignments.

Welcome to our guild Anaïs!

Anaïs one of our new members.

Saturday 24th of June.

The first thing i heard when i woke up today was not the waves of the ocean. Instead it was the rain outside the cabin on the boat between Auberdine and Rut'theran Village. Kiia had left a note where she said that she was going with some from our guild to Stratholme. I was not sure if they needed my help there or what they were doing there at all, but i decided to also go there. They were happy to see me and together with Maly and Enrondin and a human holy warrior we did managed to not only get out alive but also make the place a bit less dangerous.

I had some errand to the Hydraxian Waterlords. I have for some time collected pieces of the fallen enemies inside the molten core. I don't really know what they wanted it for, but they game me a very nice ring in return.

At midnight me and Kiia returned home to Darnassus, and while we were standing there talking a gnome did run by us. She stopped at the bank and just stood there for a while. Kiia and myself did ask what she was doing. She seemed rather afraid of us at first, but the more we spoke to each other the more calm she did seem to be. Her name was Dizilia, and she had fled away from Ironforge and the dwarfs, and in some strange way she had ended up in the elven lands and the city of Darnassus. We did talk to her for a while and told her about our guild. We even asked her to join us, which she gladly did.

Welcome to Grove of Eternal Balance Dizilia!

Dizilia

However we did also manage to lose her some hour later. But we suspect she did leave the boat and got in land in Auberdine to spend the night there. Sleeping in a moving boat was nothing for her i guess.

Sunday 25th of June.

I was feeling a bit bad today, so my plan was to stay in the bed and drinking tea and try to cure myself. I got some rather good news thou. A long lost little gnome had come back to us. Kiia was over-happy to see her, and Gliionsson who have found her looked happy as well. I am talking about Diddi. Who left us some months ago because she wanted some time on her own to think things over. She was happy to see us all and the hugging never seemed to end.

That is about all that happened during the day that i remembered. I went back to my bed and fall asleep almost directly.

*An old picture of Diddi fishing in Wetlands.
Enrondin is standing behind and watching.*

After words.

You have just read the third edition of my newsletter. Not the next week, but the next after that i have something special planed. But we will meet again before that.

And as always if you want to contact me about something you can do it via our forum. Send me a p.m. or a mail.

The address is <http://z7.invisionfree.com/GoEB/index.php>.

Thanks everyone for the week that has gone, and hope to see you all in the coming one.
